

GRE Prep

Abdullah Al Mahmud

2025-08-09

Contents

About GRE	5
GRE Verbal	7
GRE Word List . . . . .	7
GRE Short Passages . . . . .	45

About GRE

As per the ETS,

The GRE General Test closely reflects the kind of thinking you'll do in today's demanding graduate school programs, including business and law. It measures your verbal reasoning, quantitative reasoning, critical thinking and analytical writing skills — skills that have been developed over a long period of time and aren't related to a specific field of study but are important for all.

Test sections and timing (beginning September 22, 2023)

The overall test time is about 1 hour and 58 minutes. There are five sections.

Measure	Number of Questions	Allotted Time
Analytical Writing (One section)	One “Analyze an Issue” task	30 minutes
Verbal Reasoning (Two sections)	Section 1: 12 questions Section 2: 15 questions	Section 1: 18 minutes Section 2: 23 minutes
Quantitative Reasoning (Two sections)	Section 1: 12 questions Section 2: 15 questions	Section 1: 21 minutes Section 2: 26 minutes

GRE Verbal

According to the ETS, the Verbal Reasoning section measures your ability to:

- analyze and draw conclusions from discourse; reason from incomplete data; identify author's assumptions and/or perspective; understand multiple levels of meaning, such as literal, figurative and author's intent
- select important points; distinguish major from minor or irrelevant points; summarize text; understand the structure of a text
- understand the meaning of individual words, sentences and entire texts; understand relationships among words and among concepts

Know more

GRE Word List

The words are taken from Magoosh list.

- The Google sheet link
- Download the Pdf
- Download Magoosh Pdf

Jump to Letters: A | B | C | D | E | F | G | H | I | J | K | L | M | N | O | P | Q
| R | S | T | U | V | W | X | Y | Z

To see example in a sentence, click on the word.

A

Aberrant: Markedly different from an accepted norm

Aberration: A departure from what is normal, usual, or expected

Abjure: To renounce or give up a belief, cause, or claim

Aboveboard: Honest, open, and straightforward

Abrogate: To abolish, annul, or repeal formally

Abstain: To refrain from doing something, especially voluntarily

Abstruse: Difficult to understand; obscure

Abysmal: Extremely bad or appalling

Acme: The highest point or peak of something

Adamant: Unyielding in attitude or opinion, especially in the face of opposition

Adjudicate: To make a formal judgment or decision about a problem or dispute

Admonish: To warn or reprimand someone firmly

Admonitory: Serving as a warning or caution

Advocate: To publicly support or recommend a particular cause or policy

Advocate: A person who publicly supports a cause or policy

Aesthete: A person who has a deep appreciation for art or beauty

Aesthetic: Relating to beauty or artistic expression

Aesthetic: Concerned with the appreciation of beauty or art

Affable: Friendly, approachable, and easy to talk to

Affluent: Having a great deal of wealth or abundance

Afford: To have the financial means to do or buy something

Alacrity: Brisk and cheerful readiness

Altruism: The selfless concern for the well-being of others

Amalgam: A mixture or combination of different elements

Ambiguous: Having more than one possible meaning; unclear or inexact

Ambivalent: Having mixed feelings or contradictory ideas about something

Ameliorate: To improve or make something better

Amenable: Open and responsive to suggestion; easily persuaded

Amiable: Having a friendly and pleasant manner

Amorphous: Lacking a clear shape or structure; vague or ill-defined

Amplify: In a way that is plentiful or abundant

Amuck: In a frenzied, chaotic, or uncontrollable state

Anachronism: Something that is out of place in time, especially something that belongs to an earlier time

Analogous: Comparable in certain respects, typically to clarify an argument or idea

Anathema: A person or thing that is detested or loathed

Anemic: Lacking in color, vitality, or interest; weak

Animosity: Strong hostility or dislike

Anodyne: A pain-relieving drug or something that soothes or relieves pain

Anodyne: Soothing or relieving pain, stress, or discomfort

Anomalous: Deviating from what is standard, normal, or expected

Anomaly: Something that deviates from the norm or expectations

Antedated: Occurred or existed before something else; preceded in time

Antic: A playful or silly act or gesture, often in an exaggerated or absurd manner

Antipathy: A deep-seated feeling of dislike or aversion

Antiquated: Outdated or no longer in use due to age

Antithetical: Directly opposed or contrasted; mutually incompatible

Apathetic: Lacking interest, enthusiasm, or concern

Apathy: Lack of emotion, interest, or concern

Apex: The top or highest point of something

Aphorism: A concise statement of a general truth or principle

Aphoristic: Relating to an aphorism or resembling an aphorism in style

Aplomb: Self-confidence or assurance, especially when in a demanding situation

Apocryphal: Of doubtful authenticity or origin, though widely circulated as being true

Apogee: The highest point or peak of something, especially in terms of achievement

Apostate: A person who renounces or abandons their religious or political beliefs

Apothegm: A brief, concise, and instructive saying or remark

Apotheosis: The highest point in the development of something; a culmination or climax

Appease: To bring peace or calm, often by satisfying demands

Appreciable: Large or important enough to be noticed or measured

Apprehension: A fearful anticipation or anxiety about the future

Approbatory: Expressing approval or praise

Appropriate: To take something for one's own use, often without permission

Appropriate: Suitable or proper in the circumstances

- Appurtenant: Related or attached to something, often used in legal contexts
- Arbitrary: Based on random choice or personal whim, rather than reason or system
- Arcane: Known or understood by only a few people; obscure
- Arch: Deliberately playful and mischievous
- Archaic: Old-fashioned or outdated
- Arduous: Involving a lot of effort and hard work
- Arrant: Complete or utter (often used to emphasize something negative)
- Arriviste: A person who has recently risen to a position of power or influence, often in a way considered vulgar or self-serving
- Arrogate: To take or claim something without justification
- Artful: Crafty or skillful, often with the intent to deceive
- Artful: Skillfully crafted or designed
- Artifice: A clever or cunning device or trick, often used to deceive
- Artless: Without deceit or guile; innocent and sincere
- Artlessness: Innocence and sincerity; lack of deceit or cunning
- Ascendancy: The state of having more power, influence, or control over others
- Ascetic: Characterized by severe self-discipline and abstention from indulgence, often for religious reasons
- Ascetic: A person who practices severe self-discipline and abstains from all forms of indulgence
- Ascribe: To attribute something to a cause or source
- Askance: With a sideways glance, typically showing suspicion or disapproval
- Asperity: Harshness or severity, especially in tone or manner
- Assail: To attack or assault violently or aggressively
- Assiduously: With great care and perseverance
- Assuage: To ease or lessen something, such as pain or distress
- Atavism: The reappearance of a characteristic in an organism that had disappeared generations ago
- Attenuate: To reduce in force, intensity, or severity
- Audacious: Bold, daring, or fearless, especially in a reckless way
- Audacity: The willingness to take bold risks, often showing disrespect for social norms

Augment: To make something greater by adding to it

Auspicious: Conducive to success; favorable

Austere: Severe or strict in manner, attitude, or appearance

Austere: Plain and simple, without luxury or adornment

Austere: Having a stark, grim, or serious nature

Autocratic: Relating to a system of government where one person has absolute power

Autocratic: Characterized by a domineering or dictatorial manner

Autonomously: Acting independently or without external control

Avarice: Extreme greed for wealth or material gain

Avaricious: Having an insatiable desire for wealth or possessions

Avert: To turn away or prevent something from happening

Avert: To prevent the occurrence of something undesirable

Avid: Having a strong interest or enthusiasm for something

B

Badger: To harass or annoy persistently

Baleful: Threatening harm; menacing

Balk: To hesitate or be unwilling to accept an idea or undertaking

Banal: Lacking originality, freshness, or novelty

Banality: The condition of being trite, overused, or uninspired

Banish: To send someone away from a place as a punishment

Base: Morally low; lacking in honor or ethics

Bastardization: The act of corrupting or debasing something by altering it

Beatific: Showing or producing great happiness or bliss

Becoming: Attractive or suitable to the person or situation

Beg: To ask for something humbly or earnestly

Begrudge: To resent or envy someone for having something

Begrudge: To give reluctantly or with a sense of ill-will

Behooves: To be necessary or proper for someone

Belie: To give a false impression of something

Belittle: To make someone or something seem less impressive or important

Bellicose: Having a strong desire to fight or argue

Belligerent: Hostile and aggressive

Bemoan: To express sorrow or dissatisfaction about something

Benighted: In a state of moral or intellectual darkness

Benign: Kind and gentle; having a favorable or positive outcome

Benign: Not harmful or dangerous

Bereft: Deprived or lacking something

Bereft: Feeling sorrowful or lacking due to a loss

Besiege: To surround and overwhelm, often with requests or demands

Besmirch: To damage or stain the reputation of someone or something

Besotted: Infatuated or obsessed with something or someone

Besotted: Completely in love or intoxicated

Betray: To reveal or expose something or someone as a result of treachery

Bilious: Relating to bile; bad-tempered or irritable

Blatant: Completely obvious or conspicuous, often in an offensive way

Bleak: Cold, barren, or lacking in hope or enthusiasm

Blinkered: Having narrow or limited perspective

Bolster: To support or strengthen something

Boon: A thing that is helpful or beneficial

Boon: A timely or fortunate benefit

Boorish: Rude, insensitive, or uncouth in behavior

Bowdlerize: To remove or alter content deemed offensive or inappropriate, especially from a book or film

Brazen: Bold, shameless, or audacious in a way that is disrespectful

Bridle: To restrain or control, especially in terms of emotions or actions

Bridle: To show or express irritation or offense, often in a subtle manner

Bristle: To react angrily or defensively

Broadside: A strong verbal attack or criticism

Bromide: A trite or unoriginal remark intended to soothe or placate

Brook: To tolerate or endure something unpleasant

Browbeat: To intimidate or dominate someone with stern or overbearing behavior

Brusquely: In a blunt, curt, or ungracious manner

Buck: To resist or oppose something, especially an authority or system

Bucolic: Relating to the countryside or rural life; idyllic and peaceful

Bumbling: Clumsy or awkward in movement or behavior

Burgeon: To grow or expand rapidly

Buttress: To support or strengthen something, especially an argument or structure

Byzantine: Complex and intricate, often in a way that is deceptive or difficult to understand

C

Cadaverous: Resembling a corpse; pale, gaunt, or emaciated

Callow: Inexperienced and immature

Calumny: False and defamatory statements made to damage someone's reputation

Canard: A false or misleading story or report

Candid: Open, honest, and straightforward in speech or expression

Candidness: The quality of being frank, honest, and straightforward

Capitulate: To surrender or give in to demands

Capricious: Subject to sudden and unpredictable changes in mood or behavior

Cardinal: Of primary importance; fundamental

Carping: Constantly finding fault, often in a petty or trivial manner

Castigate: To reprimand or criticize severely

Cataclysm: A large-scale, disastrous event or upheaval

Catalyst: A person or thing that causes a significant change or event

Catholic: Universal in scope; including a wide range of ideas or influences

Cavalier: Showing a lack of concern or seriousness, especially toward important matters

Cede: To give up or surrender something, especially land or rights

Celerity: Swiftly or speed in movement or action

Censor: To examine and remove or suppress material considered offensive or inappropriate

Censure: To express severe disapproval of, typically in a formal statement

Cerebral: Relating to the brain or intellect; intellectual rather than emotional

Chagrin: A feeling of distress or embarrassment caused by failure or disappointment

Chagrin: Distress or regret caused by a particular event

Champion: A person who strongly supports or defends a cause or person

Charlatan: A fraud or someone who pretends to have knowledge or skills they do not possess

Chary: Being cautious or wary, especially about risks or dangers

Chastise: To scold or criticize severely

Chauvinism: Excessive or prejudiced loyalty or support for one's own group, typically to the detriment of others

Chauvinist: A person who believes in or displays excessive loyalty to their own group, often with disdain for others

Check: To examine or verify something; to stop or limit progress

Check: A restriction or control placed on something

Checkered: Marked by periods of success and failure, often in a way that is disreputable

Chimera: A fantastical or unrealistic idea, often one that is impossible to achieve

Chivalrous: Courteous, gallant, and honorable, especially toward women

Choleric: Quick-tempered, irritable, or easily angered

Chortle: A joyful, hearty laugh

Churlish: Rude, boorish, or surly

Circumscribe: To limit or restrict the scope or extent of something

Circumvent: To find a way around or avoid something, often by deceit or trickery

Clemency: Mercy or leniency, especially toward someone who has committed a crime

Coalesce: To come together or unite to form one whole

Cogent: Clear, logical, and convincing

Cohesive: Forming a unified whole, well-integrated and harmonious

Collusion: Secret or illegal cooperation or conspiracy, especially to deceive others

Colossal: Extremely large or impressive in size or degree

Commendable: Deserving praise or admiration

Commensurate: Corresponding in size, degree, or extent; proportionate

Complacent: Self-satisfied, often to the point of being unaware of potential dangers or shortcomings

Complaisant: Willing to please others; obliging

Complementary: Mutually enhancing or completing each other

Complicit: Involved with others in illegal or wrongful activities

Compound: To combine or mix elements together

Concede: To admit or acknowledge something, often reluctantly

Concede: To yield or give in, often after resistance

Concede: To grant or allow something, often in a discussion or negotiation

Conciliate: To calm down or win over, especially by appeasing or reconciling

Concomitant: Occurring or existing at the same time; accompanying

Conducive: Helping to bring about a particular result or outcome

Conflagration: A large destructive fire

Conflate: To combine or mix two or more things together, often resulting in confusion or distortion

Confound: To confuse or perplex someone or something

Confound: To cause surprise or bewilderment in someone, especially by contradicting expectations

Conniving: Engaged in secret or deceitful plotting

Consecrate: To make or declare something sacred or holy Conspicuous: Attracting attention because of being noticeable or prominent

Constituent: Part of a whole; a component or element of something

Constituent: A person who is represented by an elected official

Constraint: A limitation or restriction on something

Construe: To interpret or understand something in a particular way

Consummate: To complete or perfect something, especially in a skilled or expert manner

Consummate: Extremely skilled or accomplished

Contemptuous: Showing disdain or a lack of respect for something or someone

Contentious: Causing or likely to cause an argument or conflict

Contingent: Dependent on or determined by something else

Contingent: Subject to chance or unpredictable factors

- Contrite: Feeling or expressing remorse or regret for wrongdoing
- Contrition: The state of feeling remorseful or repentant
- Contrive: To plan or devise something, often in a clever or deceitful way
- Conundrum: A confusing or difficult problem or question
- Convivial: Friendly, sociable, and marked by
- Convolutd: Extremely complex and difficult to follow
- Copious: Abundant in quantity or number; overflowing
- Cornucopia: An abundant, overflowing supply of something, especially food
- Corollary: A direct or natural consequence or result
- Corroborate: To confirm or give support to a statement, theory, or finding
- Cosmopolitan: Familiar with and at ease in many different countries and cultures
- Cosseted: Treated with excessive care or indulgence
- Coterminous: Having the same boundaries or extent in time or space
- Countermand: To revoke or cancel a previous order or command
- Cow: To frighten or intimidate someone into submission
- Craven: Very cowardly; lacking courage
- Credence: Belief in or acceptance of something as true
- Creditable: Worthy of praise or recognition; commendable
- Credulity: The tendency to believe something too readily or easily
- Crestfallen: Feeling downcast or disappointed, especially after a failure
- Cryptic: Having a hidden or ambiguous meaning; mysterious
- Crystallize: To make something clear or definite; to form into a solid structure
- Culminate: To reach the highest point or final stage of something
- Culpability: The state of being responsible for a wrong or fault
- Cumbersome: Large or heavy and difficult to handle or manage
- Cupidity: Excessive greed, especially for wealth
- Curmudgeon: A bad-tempered or surly person, especially an old one
- D
- Dearth: A scarcity or lack of something
- Debase: To lower in status, quality, or character

- Debonair: Suave, charming, and sophisticated
- Debunk: To expose the falseness or hollowness of something
- Decimation: The destruction or killing of a large portion of a population or group
- Decorous: Proper, dignified, and socially acceptable
- Decorum: Behavior that is socially correct, dignified, and polite
- Decry: To publicly denounce or criticize
- Deferential: Showing respect and submission to another person's authority
- Defray: To pay for or cover the costs of something
- Degrade: To lower in dignity or quality; to treat someone with disrespect
- Deign: To do something that one considers to be beneath their dignity
- Delegate: To assign a task or responsibility to someone else
- Deleterious: Having a harmful effect; damaging
- Deliberate: Intentional; done with careful thought or consideration
- Delineate: To describe or portray something precisely
- Demean: To lower someone's dignity or reputation
- Demonstrative: Showing feelings or emotions openly
- Demur: To raise doubts or objections; to hesitate
- Demure: Modest, reserved, or shy in manner or behavior
- Denigrate: To criticize or belittle someone or something unfairly
- Denote: To indicate or represent something explicitly
- Denouement: The final resolution or clarification of a story's plot
- Derelict: In a state of disrepair or neglect; abandoned
- Derelict: Someone who is abandoned or neglected; homeless
- Deride: To mock or ridicule someone or something
- Derisive: Expressing contempt or mockery
- Derivative: Copied or based on something else; unoriginal
- Derive: To obtain or deduce something from a source
- Derive: To trace or obtain from a source
- Derogative: Showing a critical or disrespectful attitude
- Desecrate: To treat a sacred place or thing with disrespect or violence

Desiccated: Thoroughly dried out; lacking moisture

Desideratum: A thing that is needed or wanted

Despot: A ruler with absolute power, typically one who exercises it in a cruel or oppressive way

Destitute: Lacking the basic necessities of life

Destitute: Poverty-stricken; without means of support

Deter: To discourage or prevent from an action

Deter: To make someone less likely to do something

Detrimental: Harmful or damaging

Devolve: To transfer responsibility or power to someone else

Devolve: To degenerate or deteriorate into a worse state

Diabolical: Relating to or characteristic of the devil; evil

Diatribes: A bitter and abusive verbal attack

Dictatorial: Having or showing a tendency to tell people what to do in a way that is not open to discussion

Didactic: Intended to teach, particularly in a moralizing or instructive way

Differentiate: To recognize or show the difference between things

Differentiate: To make distinct or specialized

Diffident: Shy, lacking self-confidence

Dilapidated: In a state of disrepair or ruin due to age or neglect

Dilatory: Slow to act; intended to cause delay

Dilettante: A person who takes up an activity for amusement but lacks serious commitment or knowledge

Diligent: Showing steady, earnest, and energetic effort

Diminutive: Extremely small in size

Diminutive: Relating to a word or suffix that conveys smallness

Disabuse: To free someone from a misconception or false belief

Disaffected: Discontented or dissatisfied, especially with authority

Discord: Disagreement or conflict

Discreet: Careful and prudent in speech or behavior, especially to avoid causing offense

Discrete: Separate or distinct

- Discriminate: To recognize or show the difference between things
- Discursive: Covering a wide range of topics in a conversation or piece of writing
- Disenfranchise: To deprive someone of the right to vote or other rights
- Disheartened: Feeling discouraged or lacking in hope
- Disingenuous: Not sincere or honest
- Disinterested: Having no personal interest in something; impartial
- Disparate: Essentially different in kind; not allowing comparison
- Dispassionate: Not influenced by strong feelings or emotions
- Dispatch: To send off or deal with something promptly
- Dispatch: The act of sending someone or something to a specific destination
- Dispensation: Exemption from a rule or law
- Dissemble: To conceal one's true feelings or intentions
- Disseminate: To spread or distribute something widely
- Dissipate: To scatter or disperse something, or to waste or squander something
- Dissipate: To disappear or cause something to disappear gradually
- Dissolution: The process of formally ending or dissolving something
- Docile: Ready to accept control or instruction; submissive
- Dog: To follow or track someone persistently
- Dogmatic: Assertive in an opinionated or doctrinal way, without consideration for other viewpoints
- Doleful: Expressing sorrow or melancholy
- Dolorous: Feeling or showing sorrow or grief
- Doughty: Brave and persistent, especially in the face of difficulty
- Dovetail: To fit together harmoniously or combine well
- Dupe: To deceive or trick someone into believing something false
- Dupe: A person who is deceived or tricked
- Duplicity: Deceitfulness or double-dealing, especially by pretending to have one set of intentions while secretly having another
- Duress: Threats, violence, or other forms of coercion used to force someone to act against their will
- E
- Ebullient: Full of energy, enthusiasm, or excitement

- Eccentric: Unconventional or slightly strange in behavior or appearance
- Eclectic: Deriving ideas, style, or taste from a broad and diverse range of sources
- Economical: Using resources in a careful and efficient manner, avoiding waste
- Edifying: Providing moral or intellectual instruction
- Effacing: Erasing or wiping out; making oneself inconspicuous
- Effervescent: Bubbling with high spirits, enthusiasm, or energy
- Efficacious: Effective in producing the desired result
- Effrontery: Shameless boldness or audacity
- Egotist: A person who is excessively self-centered or self-absorbed
- Egregious: Outstandingly bad or shocking
- Eke: To manage to get or make something last longer, often with difficulty
- Elaborate: Involving many careful details or parts
- Elaborate: To explain something in greater detail
- Elegiac: Relating to or expressing sorrow, often in a poetic or melancholic manner
- Elicit: To draw out or bring forth a response, answer, or reaction
- Elucidate: To make something clear or explain it in detail
- Elude: To escape from or avoid something, often in a clever or tricky way
- Elusive: Hard to find, catch, or define
- Embellish: To make something more attractive by adding decorative details
- Embriolled: Involved deeply in a conflict or issue
- Embryonic: In an early or undeveloped stage
- Eminent: Famous, well-known, and respected in a particular field
- Empathetic: Showing an ability to understand and share the feelings of others
- Empiricism: The theory that knowledge is derived from sensory experience and evidence
- Emulate: To imitate or strive to equal or surpass someone or something, often as a form of admiration
- Enamor: To be filled with a feeling of love or admiration for someone or something
- Encumber: To restrict or weigh down, often causing difficulty or hindrance
- Endemic: Native to or characteristic of a particular region or environment

- Enervate: To weaken or drain energy, vitality, or strength
- Engender: To cause or give rise to something, especially a feeling or situation
- Enjoin: To direct or instruct someone to do something, often with authority or urgency
- Enmity: State of mutual hostility, hatred, or animosity
- Enormity: Extreme seriousness, wickedness, or vast scale of something, often negative
- Enthrall: To captivate or hold the attention of someone completely
- Entice: To attract or tempt someone to do something through appeal or persuasion
- Entrenched: Firmly established and difficult to change or remove
- Enumerate: To mention or list items one by one
- Enumerate: To count, list, or itemize in a sequential manner
- Ephemeral: Lasting for a very short period of time; fleeting
- Epigram: A short, witty, or clever remark, often with a satirical or humorous tone
- Epiphany: A sudden realization or insight, often leading to a new understanding
- Eponym: A person after whom a place, thing, or concept is named
- Equitable: Fair and impartial, treating all parties justly
- Equivocal: Open to more than one interpretation, often deliberately vague or ambiguous
- Equivocate: To speak or act in a way that is intentionally ambiguous or unclear
- Eradicate: To completely eliminate or destroy something, often with thoroughness
- Err: To make a mistake or be incorrect
- Errant: Straying from the proper course or standards; wandering
- Erratic: Unpredictable or inconsistent in behavior, movement, or quality
- Ersatz: Artificial or substitute, often inferior to the original
- Erudite: Having or showing extensive knowledge gained from reading or studying
- Eschew: To deliberately avoid or abstain from something
- Esoteric: Intended for or understood by only a small, specialized group
- Espouse: To adopt or support a particular belief, cause, or idea

Estimable: Worthy of admiration or respect; admirable

Ethereal: Light, airy, or delicate; not of this world

Euphoria: A feeling of intense happiness or well-being

Evanescent: Quickly fading or disappearing, especially in a brief or fleeting way

Evasive: Deliberately avoiding or avoiding directness, often to elude something

Evasive: Likely to evade, dodge, or escape from something or someone

Evenhanded: Fair and impartial in treatment, without bias

Exacerbate: To worsen or intensify a situation or problem

Exacting: Requiring great attention, effort, or precision

Exalt: To raise in rank, dignity, or power; to praise or glorify

Exasperate: To irritate or provoke someone to a great degree

Excoriate: To criticize or condemn severely

Excruciating: Intensely painful or agonizing

Execrate: To detest or curse vehemently

Exegesis: A critical or explanatory interpretation of a text

Exemplar: A model or pattern of excellence

Exemplify: To illustrate or clarify by example

Exemplify: To serve as a typical example of something

Exhort: To strongly encourage or urge someone to take action

Exiguity: Smallness or lack of sufficient quantity or space

Exonerate: To clear someone of blame or fault

Exorbitant: Unreasonably high or excessive, especially in price or cost

Expansive: Wide-ranging or covering a large area; sociable or open in communication

Expound: To explain or present in detail

Expunge: To erase, remove, or eliminate something completely

Expurgate: To remove offensive or inappropriate material from a text

Extant: Still in existence, surviving, or remaining

Extenuating: Making a situation or offense seem less serious or more forgivable

Extrapolate: To infer or estimate something based on existing data or trends

F

- Facetious: Treating serious issues with deliberately inappropriate humor
- Facile: Easy to achieve or attain; superficial or shallow
- Faction: Relating to a group or faction causing conflict or dissension
- Factitious: Artificially created or developed, not natural
- Fallacious: Based on a mistaken belief or faulty reasoning
- Fastidious: Very attentive to detail, hard to please, or difficult to satisfy
- Fawn: To seek favor through excessive flattery or exaggerated affection
- Feckless: Lacking initiative or strength of character, ineffective
- Fecund: Capable of producing an abundance of offspring or results; fertile
- Fell: Fierce, savage, or destructive
- Ferret: To search or hunt out, especially in a persistent or determined manner
- Fete: A large or elaborate celebration or party
- Fickle: Likely to change or fluctuate unpredictably, especially in regard to loyalty or affection
- Finagle: To obtain something through manipulation or dishonest means
- Firebrand: A person who causes trouble or incites conflict
- Flag: To signal or indicate, especially by lowering or losing energy
- Fledgling: A young bird that has just acquired feathers for flight; a beginner or novice
- Fleece: To deceive or cheat someone, often out of money
- Flippant: Disrespectfully casual or lacking seriousness
- Flounder: To struggle or move clumsily; to be uncertain or fail
- Flummox: To bewilder or confuse someone
- Flush: To redden or become warm, especially from emotion or exertion
- Flux: Continuous change or movement
- Foible: A minor weakness or flaw in someone's character
- Foment: To instigate or stir up trouble or unrest
- Foolhardy: Recklessly bold or daring without regard for consequences
- Forlorn: Desolate or abandoned; feeling lonely and hopeless
- Forthcoming: About to happen; willing to be open and cooperative
- Forthcoming: Willing to provide information or be open about something
- Forthright: Direct and straightforward in speech or behavior

Fortuitous: Happening by chance or luck, often in a fortunate way

Fractious: Prone to causing trouble or being difficult to manage

Frivolous: Not having any serious purpose or value; silly

Frugal: Prudent or economical in spending money or resources

Frustrate: To prevent something from happening or to cause annoyance or disappointment

Furtive: Secretive or stealthy, often due to guilt or fear of being caught

Futile: Incapable of producing any useful result; pointless

G

Gaffe: A mistake or blunder, especially a social mistake

Gainsay: To deny or contradict something; to oppose

Gall: To irritate or annoy someone; bold and impudent behavior

Gall: To irritate or annoy someone; bold and impudent behavior

Galvanize: To shock or excite someone into taking action

Gambit: A strategic move or action, often with some risk involved

Garrulous: Excessively talkative, especially about trivial matters

Gauche: Lacking social grace or sensitivity; awkward

Genial: Friendly and cheerful in manner

Genteel: Refined, polite, and respectable, often in an exaggerated way

Germane: Relevant and appropriate to the subject being discussed

Gerrymander: To manipulate the boundaries of an electoral district to favor one group

Glean: To gather or collect information or materials bit by bit

Glib: Fluent and voluble, but often insincere or superficial

Glut: An excessive quantity of something; to flood or oversupply

Glut: An excessive quantity of something; to flood or oversupply

Goad: To provoke or urge someone to take action, often with irritation

Gossamer: Something delicate, light, or flimsy, often used to describe fine or thin materials

Graft: To implant or insert, often used in the context of unethical practices or corruption

Grandiloquent: Using pompous or extravagant language to impress others

Gregarious: Enjoying the company of others; sociable

Grovel: To act in a servile or submissive manner, often in a desperate attempt to please

Guffaw: A loud and boisterous laugh

Guileless: Free from deceit or cunning; innocent and straightforward

Gumption: Shrewd or spirited initiative and resourcefulness

H

Hackneyed: Overused and lacking originality; trite

Hagiographic: Excessively flattering or idealizing someone, especially in a biographical context

Hail: To greet or acclaim enthusiastically; to call out in order to attract attention

Halcyon: Characterized by peace, happiness, and tranquility

Hamper: To obstruct or impede the progress or movement of something

Hamstrung: To severely restrict or limit someone's ability to act or function

Haphazard: Characterized by lack of planning or order; random

Harangue: A lengthy and aggressive speech or lecture

Harangue: A lengthy and aggressive speech or lecture

Harried: Feeling distressed or harassed due to demands or pressure

Haughty: Arrogantly superior and disdainful

Hauteur: Arrogance or disdain; a haughty manner

Hector: To bully or harass someone

Hedge: To avoid giving a direct answer or commitment; to limit or qualify a statement

Hegemony: Leadership or dominance, especially by one country or social group over others

Heretic: A person who holds beliefs that are contrary to the established religious or societal norms

Heyday: The period of greatest success, popularity, or power

Histrionic: Overly dramatic or emotional, often with an intent to attract attention

Hoary: Gray or white with age; old and venerable

Hobble: To restrict or hinder movement, often in a way that causes difficulty

Hodgepodge: A confusing mixture of different elements; a jumble

Hoodwink: To deceive or trick someone

Hound: To harass or pursue relentlessly

Hubris: Excessive pride or self-confidence, often leading to downfall

Humdrum: Monotonous and dull; lacking excitement or variety

I

Iconoclast: A person who attacks or criticizes traditional beliefs, institutions, or values

Iconoclastic: Characterized by an attack on established beliefs or institutions

Idiosyncrasy: A characteristic or habit that is peculiar to an individual or group

Ignoble: Not honorable in character or purpose

Ignominious: Deserving or causing public shame or disgrace

Illicit: Illegal or forbidden by law, rules, or custom

Illustrious: Highly distinguished or famous, especially in a particular field

Imbibe: To drink (especially alcohol); to absorb or soak up knowledge or information

Imbroglio: A complicated and confusing situation or disagreement

Immaterial: Not important or relevant; lacking physical substance

Immure: To enclose or imprison someone against their will

Immutable: Unchanging over time; unalterable

Impartial: Not biased or partial; treating all people or situations equally

Impeccable: Without fault or error; flawless

Impecunious: Having little or no money; poor

Impede: To obstruct or delay the progress or movement of something

Impending: About to happen; looming

Imperious: Assuming power or authority without justification; arrogantly domineering

Impermeable: Not allowing fluid to pass through; not penetrable

Impertinent: Not showing proper respect; rude or impolite

Impervious: Not allowing something to pass through or affect; immune

Impetuous: Acting or done quickly without thought or care; impulsive

Implacable: Unable to be calmed down or appeased

Implausible: Not seeming reasonable or probable

Implicate: To show or suggest that someone is involved in a crime or wrongdoing
Implicate: To show or suggest that someone is involved in a crime or wrongdoing
Imponderable: Impossible to estimate or assess; difficult to consider Importuned: To ask persistently or forcefully for something
Impregnable: Unable to be defeated, overcome, or penetrated
Improvident: Not planning for the future; wasteful or careless with resources
Imprudent: Lacking good judgment or wisdom; rash
Impudent: Shamelessly bold or disrespectful; rude
Impugn: To attack or challenge the truth, validity, or integrity of something Impute: To attribute (a wrongdoing or fault) to someone or something Inadvertent: Not intentional; unintentional
Inanity: Foolishness or silliness; lack of sense or meaning
Inarticulate: Unable to express oneself clearly or effectively in speech or writing
Incense: To make very angry; to enrage
Incessant: Continuing without interruption; unceasing
Inchoate: Just begun and not fully formed or developed
Incisive: Clear, sharp, and direct; having a sharp mental focus
Inclement: Severe, harsh, or unkind (often referring to weather)
Inclement: Severe, harsh, or unkind (often referring to weather)
Incongruous: Not in harmony or keeping with the surroundings or other aspects Incontrovertible: Not able to be denied or disputed; indisputable
Incorrigible: Incapable of being corrected, reformed, or improved
Incumbent: Holding a particular position or office; obligatory or required
Indecorous: Lacking proper decorum; inappropriate or improper behavior
Indict: To formally accuse or charge someone with a crime
Indifference: Lack of interest, concern, or sympathy
Indigenous: Native to a particular place or environment
Indigent: Poor or needy; lacking basic necessities of life
Indigent: Poor or needy; lacking basic necessities of life
Indignant: Feeling or showing anger or strong displeasure due to something unjust or wrong

Industrious: Hardworking and diligent in accomplishing tasks
Ineffable: Too great or extreme to be expressed or described in words
Ineluctable: Impossible to avoid or escape; inescapable
Inequity: Lack of fairness or justice; unfairness
Inexorable: Relentless or unstoppable; unable to be persuaded or moved Infelicitous: Unfortunate or inappropriate; awkwardly expressed Inflammable: Capable of catching fire easily; highly flammable Ingenuity: The quality of being clever, original, and inventive
Ingenuous: Innocent, candid, and sincere; naïve
Ingratiate: To gain favor or approval by deliberate efforts
Inimical: Hostile or harmful; showing opposition or ill will Inimitable: Impossible to imitate or copy; unique
Inkling: A vague idea or slight suspicion
Innocuous: Harmless; not likely to cause any injury or offense
Inscrutable: Impossible to understand or interpret; mysterious
Insidious: Proceeding in a gradual, subtle way but with harmful effects
Inspid: Lacking flavor, vigor, or interest; dull
Insolent: Showing a rude or arrogant lack of respect
Insolvent: Unable to pay debts; bankrupt
Insouciance: Casual lack of concern; indifference
Insufferable: Too extreme to be endured; unbearable
Intermittent: Occurring at irregular intervals; not continuous Interneccine: Relating to conflict within a group or organization; mutually destructive Intimate: Closely acquainted, personal, or private Intimation: A hint or suggestion of something
Intransigent: Unwilling to change one's views or to agree
Intrepid: Fearless and adventurous; courageous
Inundate: To overwhelm or flood with a large amount of something
Inure: To become accustomed to something unpleasant or difficult
Invective: Insulting, abusive, or highly critical language

Inveterate: Having a particular habit or quality that is long-established and unlikely to change

Invidious: Likely to arouse resentment or anger in others

Inviolable: Never to be broken, infringed, or dishonored; sacred

Inviolable: Free or safe from injury or violation

Involved: Complex or complicated; emotionally engaged

Irascible: Easily angered or irritated; short-tempered

Irk: To irritate or annoy

Irrefutable: Impossible to disprove; indisputable

Irresolute: Uncertain or indecisive; lacking determination

Irrevocable: Not able to be changed, undone, or reversed

Itinerant: Traveling from place to place, especially for work

J

Jargon: Specialized or technical language used by a particular group

Jaundice: A medical condition causing yellowing of the skin and eyes

Jejune: Lacking in substance or significance; dull or boring

Jejune: Lacking maturity or experience; simplistic

Jingoism: Extreme patriotism, especially in the form of aggressive or warlike foreign policy

Jingoist: A person with extreme patriotic beliefs, often in support of war or aggression

Jocular: Characterized by joking or humor; playful

Jovial: Cheerful and good-humored

Jubilant: Showing great joy, satisfaction, or triumph

Juggernaut: A massive, unstoppable force or entity

Junta: A military or political group that rules after taking power by force

Juxtapose: To place different things side by side for comparison or contrast

K

Kowtow: To act in an excessively subservient manner

L

Laborious: Requiring much effort and hard work

Lacerate: To tear or cut something, especially the skin

Lachrymose: Given to tears or weeping; tearful
Laconic: Using few words; brief and concise
Lambast: To criticize harshly and publicly
Lampoon: To publicly mock or ridicule
Languid: Weak, tired, or lacking energy
Languish: To suffer from being in an unpleasant situation or state
Largess: Generosity in giving, especially gifts or money
Lascivious: Feeling or displaying an excessive desire for sexual pleasure
Laudable: Worthy of praise or admiration
Leery: Feeling cautious or suspicious
Lethargic: Lacking energy or enthusiasm; sluggish
Limpid: Clear and transparent, especially of liquids
Lionize: To treat someone as a celebrity; to praise or idolize
Litany: A long list, often one that is repetitive or tedious
Loath: Reluctant or unwilling
Lucid: Clear and easy to understand
Lugubrious: Looking or sounding sad and dismal

M

Macabre: Having a quality of gruesome or disturbing horror
Machinate: To scheme or plot in a secretive or deceptive way
Magisterial: Having an air of authority or superiority
Magnanimous: Generous or forgiving, especially toward a rival or less powerful person
Maintain: To assert or state something, often strongly or firmly
Maladroit: Clumsy or awkward in action or behavior
Malady: A disease or ailment
Malapropism: The mistaken use of a word in place of a similar-sounding one Malevolent: Having or showing a wish to do evil to others
Malfeasance: Wrongdoing, especially by a public official
Malingerer: Someone who pretends to be ill or injured to avoid work or duty
Malleable: Capable of being shaped or influenced

- Malodorous: Having a bad or unpleasant smell
- Martial: Relating to war or the military
- Martinet: A strict disciplinarian, especially in the military
- Maudlin: Excessively sentimental, often through tears or self-pity
- Maunder: To talk in a rambling or incoherent way
- Maverick: An independent-minded person, especially one who does not follow the usual rules or conventions
- Mawkish: Excessively sentimental, to the point of being sickly
- Maxim: A general truth, fundamental principle, or rule of conduct
- Meander: To wander or move aimlessly
- Melancholy: A deep, persistent sadness
- Melee: A confused fight or struggle
- Mellifluous: Having a smooth, rich, and sweet sound
- Mendacity: The quality of being untruthful or dishonest
- Mendicant: A beggar or someone who relies on charity
- Mercurial: Subject to sudden or unpredictable changes in mood or behavior
- Mesmerize: To capture the complete attention of someone, often as if by magic
- Meteoric: Resembling the sudden and dramatic rise or fall of a meteor
- Meticulous: Showing great attention to detail; very careful and precise
- Mettlesome: Having a brave or determined spirit
- Misanthrope: A person who dislikes or distrusts humanity
- Misattribute: To incorrectly assign or ascribe something to a person, cause, or source
- Misconstrue: To interpret something incorrectly
- Miscreant: A person who behaves badly or criminally
- Miser: A person who hoards wealth and spends as little as possible
- Moment: Significance or importance
- Moot: Open to debate or argument; unresolved
- Mordant: Sharply critical or sarcastic
- Moribund: At the point of death; in terminal decline
- Morose: Sullen and ill-tempered
- Morph: To undergo transformation or change

Mulct: To defraud or swindle; to impose a fine

Mundane: Ordinary, everyday, or dull

Mundane: Relating to the world rather than the spiritual

Munificent: Very generous

Muted: Quiet, soft, subdued

Myopic: Short-sighted; lacking foresight or perspective

Myriad: A countless or extremely large number

N

Nadir: The lowest point of something, particularly in a figurative sense

Negligible: So small or unimportant as to be not worth considering

Nettlesome: Causing annoyance or difficulty

Noisome: Having an unpleasant odor or being harmful to health

Nonchalant: Casual, indifferent, or unconcerned

Nonplussed: Confused, unsure of how to respond

Nuance: A subtle difference or distinction

O

Obdurate: Stubbornly resistant to influence or persuasion

Objurgate: To scold or rebuke harshly

Obliging: Willing to help or assist others; cooperative

Oblique: Not straightforward or direct; slanting or angled

Obscure: Unclear or difficult to understand; hidden or unknown

Obscure: To make something unclear or less visible

Obsequious: Excessively eager to please or serve others; servile

Obstinate: Stubbornly refusing to change one's opinion or course of action

Obstreperous: Noisy and difficult to control

Obtain: To acquire or gain possession of something

Obtuse: Slow to understand or perceive; lacking sharpness

Officious: Excessively eager to offer unwanted services or advice

Opaque: Not allowing light to pass through; not transparent

Opulence: Great wealth, luxury, or abundance

Ornate: Elaborately decorated or adorned

Ossify: To become rigid or inflexible in thinking or behavior

Ostentatious: Showy or extravagant in a way that is meant to attract attention

Ostracize: To exclude or banish someone from a group or society

Overweening: Excessively arrogant or self-important

P

Palatable: Acceptable or pleasant to the taste or mind

Palaver: Talk that is long-winded, empty, or insincere

Palimpsest: A manuscript or document that has been erased and rewritten, often multiple times

Panacea: A universal remedy or solution for all problems

Panache: Flair, style, or distinctive elegance

Panegyric: A formal public praise or tribute

Paradoxical: Seemingly self-contradictory or absurd but potentially true

Paragon: A model of excellence or perfection

Paragon: A person or thing regarded as a perfect example of a particular quality

Pariah: An outcast or someone who is despised or rejected by others

Parochial: Limited or narrow in scope, often relating to a parish or local area

Parsimonious: Extremely frugal or unwilling to spend money

Parvenu: A person who has recently acquired wealth or social status but is considered an outsider

Pastoral: Relating to the countryside or rural life; idealized or romanticized view of rural life

Patent: Clearly evident or obvious; a legal right granted for an invention

Patronize: To treat with condescension or as if one is superior

Paucity: A scarcity or lack of something

Pecuniary: Relating to or involving money

Pedantic: Excessively concerned with minor details or formal rules

Pedestrian: Lacking imagination, dull, or ordinary

Peevish: Quick to show annoyance or irritation

Pejorative: Expressing disapproval or negative connotations

Pellucid: Transparent or clear in meaning or appearance

Penurious: Poor, destitute, or unwilling to spend money

- Penurious: Very poor or lacking in resources
- Percipient: Having an ability to perceive or understand things clearly
- Peremptory: Not allowing refusal or contradiction; authoritative
- Perennial: Continuing or lasting for a long time, often used for plants that grow year after year
- Perfidy: Faithlessness, betrayal, or treachery
- Perfunctory: Done with minimal effort or enthusiasm; routine
- Peripatetic: Wandering or traveling from place to place
- Pernicious: Having a harmful or destructive effect
- Perpetuate: To make something continue or last indefinitely
- Perquisite: A special privilege or benefit received in addition to regular income or salary
- Perspicacious: Having keen insight or perception
- Pertinent: Relevant or directly related to the matter at hand
- Perturb: To disturb or unsettle, especially in a way that causes anxiety
- Peruse: To read carefully or thoroughly
- Petulant: Childishly sulky or bad-tempered
- Phantasmagorical: Having a surreal or dreamlike quality; fantastical
- Philistine: A person who is indifferent or hostile to culture, art, or intellectual pursuits
- Phlegmatic: Having a calm, composed, or unemotional demeanor
- Picayune: Of little value or importance; petty
- Pillory: A device for public punishment; to publicly shame or criticize
- Pine: To feel intense longing or desire, often accompanied by sadness
- Pinnacle: The highest point or peak of something
- Piquant: Having a pleasantly sharp taste or stimulating interest
- Pith: The essential or central part of something
- Pithy: Concise and forcefully expressive
- Pittance: A small or inadequate amount, especially of money
- Placate: To calm or soothe someone, often by appeasing them
- Placid: Calm and peaceful; without disturbance
- Platitude: A remark or statement that is trite or overused, lacking in originality

Plodding: Moving or proceeding slowly and steadily, often without excitement

Ploy: A clever or deceitful tactic or maneuver used to achieve a goal

Plucky: Having courage or determination in difficult situations

Poignant: Evoking a strong feeling of sadness, pity, or regret

Polemic: A strong verbal or written attack on someone or something

Pollyannaish: Overly optimistic or excessively positive, often unrealistically so

Ponderous: Slow, heavy, or clumsy; often referring to writing or speech that is overly serious or dull

Pontificate: To speak in a pompous or self-important manner

Portentous: Having a foreboding or ominous quality; something that signifies a warning or indication

Posit: To assume or assert something as a fact, often as the basis for an argument

Powwow: A meeting or conference, often for discussion or decision-making

Pragmatic: Practical and focused on actual results rather than theory or ideals

Precarious: Unstable, uncertain, or dangerous

Precedent: An earlier event or action that serves as an example or guide for future occurrences

Precipitate: To cause something to happen suddenly or prematurely

Precipitate: To move or act with suddenness or urgency, often with little thought

Precipitous: Steep or abrupt; occurring suddenly with little warning

Preclude: To prevent something from happening or make it impossible

Precocious: Having developed certain abilities or talents at an earlier age than usual

Predilection: A preference or liking for something

Preempt: To take action in order to prevent an event from happening or to gain an advantage

Preemptive: Intended to prevent or forestall a future action

Prescience: Knowledge of events before they happen; foresight

Presentiment: A feeling or intuition about a future event, often one that is unfavorable

Presumption: An assumption or belief that something is true based on evidence or reasoning

Presumption: The act of assuming something is true without proof

Presumptuous: Taking liberties or making assumptions in a way that is arrogant or overconfident

Prevail: To be victorious or dominant in a particular situation

Prevail: To prove more powerful or influential in a conflict or situation

Prevaricate: To speak or act in an evasive or dishonest way to avoid the truth

Primacy: The state of being the most important or influential

Pristine: In an original, pure, or unspoiled condition

Pristine: Clean and fresh as if new; unaffected by human influence

Probity: Strong moral principles, integrity, and honesty

Prodigal: Wastefully extravagant, especially with money

Prodigious: Impressively large or great in extent, size, or degree

Profligate: Recklessly extravagant or wasteful in the use of resources

Profligate: Excessively wasteful or immoral in behavior

Profuse: Produced or existing in large amounts

Profusion: An abundance or large quantity of something

Prognostication: A prediction or forecast, especially about the future

Prolific: Producing a large number of works, results, or offspring

Prolixity: The quality of being excessively long-winded or wordy

Promulgate: To make an idea, belief, or law known and widely accepted

Propitiate: To win or regain the favor of someone by pleasing them

Propitious: Indicating a good chance of success; favorable

Proponent: A person who advocates for or supports a particular idea or cause

Prosaic: Lacking imagination or creativity; dull and ordinary

Proscribe: To forbid or prohibit, especially by law or authority

Proselytize: To attempt to convert someone to a particular belief, religion, or opinion

Protean: Readily changing form or character; versatile

Provident: Preparing for the future; prudent or thrifty

Provincial: Limited in scope; narrow-minded; relating to a specific region or province

Provisional: Temporary or conditional, not permanent

Puerile: Childish or immature in a way that is inappropriate or trivial

Pugnacious: Eager or quick to fight or argue

Puissant: Powerful or mighty

Punctilious: Showing great attention to detail or correct behavior

Pundit: An expert or learned person, especially one who is frequently consulted

Pyrrhic: Achieved at too great a cost, often one that outweighs the victory itself

Q

Quail: To show fear or apprehension, to shrink or cower

Qualify: To limit or modify in meaning, to meet the requirements or conditions

Qualify: To meet certain criteria or to add to a statement to make it more specific

Qualm: A feeling of doubt, uneasiness, or moral concern

Quandary: A state of uncertainty or dilemma

Querulous: Complaining or whining, often in a petulant or annoying way

Quip: A witty remark or a clever, often sarcastic, comment

Quisling: A traitor who collaborates with an enemy force occupying their country

Quixotic: Exceedingly idealistic; unrealistic or impractical in pursuit of ideals

Quotidian: Occurring daily; commonplace or ordinary

R

Raconteur: A person who tells stories or anecdotes in an entertaining way

Raffish: Displaying a carefree or unconventional attitude, often in a way that is slightly disreputable

Raft: A large number or collection of something

Raillery: Good-natured, playful ridicule or banter

Rakish: Having a dashing, jaunty, or slightly disreputable appearance

Rankle: To cause persistent irritation or anger

Rapprochement: The establishment or resumption of harmonious relations

Rarefied: Concerned with a select or elite group; esoteric or refined

Rash: Showing a lack of careful consideration of the possible consequences; reckless

Ravenous: Extremely hungry or eager for something

Rebuke: To criticize or reprimand someone sharply

- Recapitulation: A summary or restatement of the main points
- Reconcile: To restore friendly relations or resolve a dispute
- Recondite: Little known or obscure, especially pertaining to complex or scholarly knowledge
- Recrimination: An accusation made in response to an accusation, especially in a dispute
- Recrudesce: To break out or recur after a period of inactivity
- Redoubtable: Formidable, especially as an opponent
- Redress: To correct a wrong or provide compensation
- Refractory: Stubborn or resistant to authority or control
- Refute: To disprove or counter an argument or assertion
- Relegate: To assign or demote to a lower position or status
- Remiss: Negligent or careless in the performance of a duty
- Remonstrate: To protest or object strongly
- Renege: To go back on a promise or contract
- Replete: Filled or well-supplied with something
- Reprisal: An act of retaliation or revenge
- Reproach: To express disapproval or disappointment with someone or something
- Reprobate: Morally unprincipled or corrupt
- Repudiate: To reject or disown, especially formally or with conviction
- Rescind: To revoke, cancel, or repeal a decision, law, or contract
- Reservation: A doubt or concern, often about something not fully understood or agreed upon
- Resignation: The acceptance of something undesirable but inevitable; formal submission
- Resolve: To make a firm decision about something
- Respite: A short period of rest or relief from something difficult or unpleasant
- Restive: Restless, difficult to control, or impatient under restriction
- Resurgent: Rising or reviving after a period of inactivity or decline
- Reticent: Reluctant to speak or express one's thoughts
- Retiring: Shy, reserved, or inclined to avoid social contact
- Retract: To withdraw or take back something previously stated or committed to

Reverent: Showing deep respect or veneration

Ribald: Offensive, coarse, or vulgar in speech or behavior

Rile: To irritate or provoke someone, especially to anger

Robust: Strong, healthy, or able to withstand difficult conditions

Row: A serious dispute or argument; a line or tier of things or people

Rudimentary: Basic, primitive, or in an early stage of development

Rustic: Relating to the countryside; simple, rural, or unsophisticated

S

Sagacious: Having keen insight and sound judgment; wise

Sanctimonious: Making a show of being morally superior to others; self-righteous

Sanction: A penalty or punishment for disobedience; or, to approve or authorize something

Sanction: A formal authorization or approval, or the imposition of a penalty

Sangfroid: Calmness or composure, especially under stress or pressure

Sanguine: Optimistic or positive, especially in a difficult situation

Sardonic: Mocking, cynical, or scornfully derisive

Sartorial: Relating to clothing or style of dress

Saturnine: Gloomy, morose, or sullen in temperament

Savvy: Shrewdness, practical knowledge, or understanding

Savvy: Practical ability or intelligence

Savvy: Knowledgeable or perceptive in understanding practical matters

Schadenfreude: Taking pleasure in the misfortune of others

Scintillating: Sparkling, shining, or brilliantly clever

Screed: A long, often tedious or boring written piece

Scrupulous: Having strong moral principles, or being diligent and thorough in one's work

Scrupulous: Very careful to do things correctly, especially in terms of ethics

Sedulous: Showing dedication and diligence in work or effort

Semblance: An outward appearance or form, often one that is misleading

Sententious: Expressing a moralistic or pompous attitude, often in a self-righteous manner

Sentimental: Having or displaying tender feelings, often excessively so

Serendipity: The occurrence of events by chance in a happy or beneficial way

Serene: Calm, peaceful, and untroubled

Simulacrum: An image or representation of something; a superficial or insubstantial likeness

Simulacrum: An imitation or representation of something

Sinecure: A job or position that requires little or no work, often with a good salary

Slapdash: Done in a hasty or careless manner

Smattering: A small amount or superficial knowledge of something

Smug: Excessively self-satisfied, often in a way that is irritating to others

Snide: Indirectly mocking or derogatory in a way that is often unpleasant

Snub: To treat someone with disdain or a lack of respect

Solecism: A grammatical mistake or a breach of good manners or social etiquette

Solicitous: Showing concern or care for someone's well-being

Solicitude: Concern or anxiety for the welfare of someone

Soporific: Causing sleep or drowsiness; boring

Sordid: Morally dirty or base; sleazy or dishonorable

Spartan: Marked by simplicity and lack of luxury; disciplined

Specious: Seemingly true or plausible but actually false

Specious: Misleading in appearance, especially misleadingly attractive

Spendthrift: One who spends money recklessly or extravagantly

Splenetic: Irritable; easily angered

Sporadic: Occurring irregularly or infrequently

Spurious: False, fake, or not genuine

Spurn: To reject disdainfully or with contempt

Squander: To waste something (especially money or time) recklessly

Squelch: To silence or suppress forcibly

Staid: Serious, sober, and unadventurous in behavior or appearance

Stalwart: Loyal, reliable, and hardworking

Start: To suddenly move or react in surprise or alarm

Staunch: Loyal and committed in attitude

Steadfast: Firm and unwavering in purpose, loyalty, or resolve

Stem: To stop or restrict the flow of something

Stipend: A regular and fixed payment, often for services or living expenses

Stolid: Calm, dependable, and showing little emotion or animation

Stringent: Strict, precise, and exacting

Stultify: To make ineffective or useless; to cause to lose enthusiasm

Stymie: To block or hinder the progress of

Subsume: To include or absorb something into a larger category or group

Subsume: To classify under a general principle or heading

Subterfuge: Deceit used in order to achieve one's goal; trickery

Subversive: Intended to undermine or overthrow authority or an established system

Sullen: Gloomy, morose, or sulky in mood

Summit: The highest point or peak

Summit: A meeting between high-level leaders

Supercilious: Behaving or looking as though one thinks one is superior to others

Superfluous: Unnecessary, especially through being more than enough

Superfluous: Exceeding what is sufficient or required; surplus

Supplant: To replace or take the place of, especially by force or strategy

Surfeit: An excessive amount of something; overindulgence

Surly: Bad-tempered and unfriendly

Surreptitious: Secretive or stealthy, especially to avoid notice or attention

Sybarite: A person devoted to luxury and pleasure

Sycophant: Someone who acts obsequiously toward someone important to gain advantage; a flatterer

T

Taciturn: Habitually silent or reserved; not talkative

Tact: Sensitivity in dealing with others or with difficult issues

Tantamount: Equivalent in seriousness or effect

Tarnish: To lose or cause to lose luster, reputation, or value

Tawdry: Showy but cheap and of poor quality

Taxing: Physically or mentally demanding

Telling: Revealing; significant and expressive

Telltale: Indicating or revealing information; revealing a secret

Temerity: Excessive confidence or boldness; audacity

Temperance: Moderation or self-restraint, especially in eating and drinking

Tempered: Moderated or restrained; balanced in tone or intensity

Tempestuous: Characterized by strong and turbulent or conflicting emotions

Tenacious: Persistent; holding fast or firmly to something

Tendentious: Marked by a strong implicit point of view; biased

Tender: To offer formally; also, gentle or kind

Thoroughgoing: Involving or attending to every detail or aspect; complete

Thrifty: Careful with money; economical

Thwart: To prevent or hinder; to oppose successfully

Timorous: Fearful or timid

Tirade: A long, angry speech of criticism or accusation

Torpor: A state of physical or mental inactivity; lethargy

Tortuous: Full of twists and turns; excessively complex

Tout: To promote or praise energetically; to solicit support

Tractable: Easily managed or controlled; docile

Transient: Lasting only for a short time; impermanent

Transitory: Temporary; lasting a very short time

Transmute: To change in form, nature, or substance

Travail: Painful or laborious effort

Travesty: A distorted or grossly inferior imitation; a mockery

Treacherous: Dangerous or deceitful; likely to betray trust

Trenchant: Vigorous or incisive in expression or style

Tribulation: Great trouble or suffering

Trite: Lacking originality or freshness; overused

Truculence: Eagerness to fight or argue; aggressiveness

Truculent: Fierce, cruel, or aggressively defiant

Truncate: To shorten by cutting off a part

Tumult: A loud, confused noise, especially caused by a crowd; chaos

Turgid: Pompous and overly complex in style or language

Turpitude: Depravity; moral corruption

Tyro: A beginner or novice

U

Umbrage: Offense or annoyance

Unassailable: Unable to be attacked, questioned, or defeated

Uncanny: Strange or mysterious, especially in an unsettling way

Uncompromising: Unwilling to change one's views or to agree

Unconscionable: Not right or reasonable; morally unacceptable

Undermine: To weaken or sabotage gradually

Underscore: To emphasize or highlight

Underwrite: To support financially

Unequivocal: Leaving no doubt; unambiguous

Unflappable: Having or showing calmness in a crisis

Unforthcoming: Not willing to divulge information

Unimpeachable: Beyond doubt or reproach; unquestionable

Unnerve: To make someone lose confidence or feel afraid

Unprecedented: Never done or known before

Unprepossessing: Not attractive or appealing in appearance

Unpropitious: Not indicating a good chance of success; unfavorable

Unruly: Disorderly and disruptive; not easily controlled

Unscrupulous: Having or showing no moral principles; dishonest

Unseemly: Not proper or appropriate; indecorous

Unstinting: Very generous; not holding back

Untenable: Not able to be maintained or defended

Untoward: Unexpected and inappropriate; inconvenient

Untrammelled: Not restricted or hampered; free

Unviable: Not capable of working successfully; not feasible

Upbraid: To scold or reproach severely

Urbane: Courteous and refined in manner

V

Vacillate: To waver between different opinions or actions

Vacuous: Lacking ideas or intelligence; empty

Vanquish: To defeat thoroughly

Variance: The quality of being different; inconsistency

Vaunted: Boasted about or praised excessively

Vehement: Showing strong feeling; forceful and passionate

Venality: The condition of being susceptible to bribery or corruption

Veneer: A thin surface layer; a deceptive outward appearance

Venerate: To regard with great respect

Venial: Easily excused or forgiven; minor

Veracious: Truthful; accurate

Verisimilitude: The appearance of being true or real

Veritable: Used as an intensifier to qualify a metaphor; real, genuine

Vicarious: Experienced through the feelings or actions of another

Vicissitude: A change of circumstances, typically unwelcome or unpleasant

Vie: To compete eagerly with someone to do or achieve something

Vilify: To speak or write about in a disparaging manner

Vindicate: To clear from blame or suspicion

Vindictive: Having or showing a strong desire for revenge

Virago: A domineering, violent, or bad-tempered woman

Vitriol: Cruel and bitter criticism

Vitriolic: Filled with bitter criticism or malice

Vituperate: To blame or insult in strong or violent language

Vociferous: Expressing opinions loudly and forcefully

Volubility: The quality of talking fluently, readily, or incessantly

Voracious: Having a huge appetite; excessively eager

W

Wanting: Lacking in a required or necessary quality

Wanton: Deliberate and unprovoked (especially of a cruel or violent act)

Wax: To gradually increase in size or intensity

Whimsical: Playfully quaint or fanciful; unpredictable

Winsome: Attractive or appealing in a charming way

X

Y

Z

Zeitgeist: The defining spirit or mood of a particular period of history

Zenith: The highest point; the peak

GRE Short Passages

The passages are meant to allow you practice the GRE words after learning them. They will help you recall the meaning.

Click the word to see its meaning

0.0.1 Segment 01

0.0.1.1 Passage 01

The speaker’s attempt to embellish the facts only served to confuse the audience, as he began to meander through irrelevant anecdotes. In contrast, his opponent’s argument was both cerebral and cogent, supported by data and a clear logical structure. The most compelling corollary to her reasoning was that effective policies must remain steadfast even in the face of political turbulence. Her dispassionate tone contrasted sharply with his tendency to belittle opposing views. In a move to preempt criticism, she addressed the weaknesses in her proposal openly, avoiding the kind of duplicity that had undermined earlier debates.

0.0.1.2 Passage 02

The museum’s new exhibit, curated by a renowned aesthete, was a cohesive blend of classical elegance and modern flair. While most attendees were genteel in their praise, one critic offered a sardonic take, calling the fusion “a tasteful train wreck.” Reactions were largely contingent on personal taste, but the artist, known for her whimsical style, remained unfazed. The choice to feature an anomalous piece—a digital sculpture made entirely of sound—was seen by some as an aberration. Yet, for others, it captured the very imponderable nature of art itself.

0.0.1.3 Passage 03

As the storm grew more inclement, officials moved quickly to avert disaster by evacuating the area. The mayor, usually expansive in demeanor, grew solemn, eventually forced to concede that their preparations had fallen short. Citizens, bereft of shelter and supplies, began to besiege local aid centers. Critics did not hesitate to censure the administration for the glaring inequity in resource distribution. News outlets sought to delineate the chain of failures that had led to this crisis, particularly the neglect of vulnerable neighborhoods—areas many accused the government of having desecrated through years of policy indifference.

0.0.1.4 Passage 04

His career had finally reached its summit, a pinnacle of achievement few in his field could rival. But success did not make him complacent. While others might indulge, he maintained a spartan lifestyle, eschewing luxury for discipline. A sudden scandal emerged, yet he remained untouched, his character long considered unimpeachable. In the face of public frenzy, where commentators maundered endlessly with little substance, he took quiet but firm action. Though the crisis was an anomaly in an otherwise smooth trajectory, his resolve never faltered. He worked to foment meaningful change rather than retaliation, an estimable quality that drew admiration—even from opponents. In contrast, his rival's forlorn efforts to stir a melee of public opinion quickly fizzled, lacking the gravity or grace to match him.

0.0.2 Segment 02

0.0.2.1 Passage 01

She tried to equivocate during the interview, dodging questions about her controversial report, but the panel wasn't fooled. The once effervescent scientist now appeared morose, her energy drained by months of criticism. The backlash had been excruciating, amplified by the media's relentless desire to pillory anyone who defied consensus. Attempts to squelch the uproar had failed, and even her supporters grew disheartened. What was most poignant was the contrast between her current state and her past brilliance—when she made prodigious discoveries and carried herself with inspiring confidence. But over time, her once-bold stance softened into a complacent silence, worn down by a system that punished dissent.

0.0.2.2 Passage 02

Launched in 1990, the Hubble Space Telescope marked a revolutionary shift in astronomy, offering a level of detail previously thought unattainable. Despite initial setbacks—including an anemic start due to a flawed mirror—subsequent repairs transformed it into one of science’s most estimable tools. The fete surrounding its discoveries was well-deserved, from capturing distant galaxies to providing data that challenged cosmic expansion theories. Though occasionally disheartened by delays and budget cuts, the scientific community remained steadfast, recognizing that even minor discoveries could recrudesce dormant questions about our universe’s origins.

0.0.2.3 Passage 03

In the field of geography, a tyro may initially struggle with the complexities of spatial data and climate modeling, often overwhelmed by the depth of knowledge required. However, with time and guidance, even the most inarticulate students can develop the necessary skills, becoming more savvy in interpreting maps and understanding ecological patterns. A rapprochement between theory and practice is often seen as students dovetail their learning experiences with real-world applications. Though early lessons can sometimes feel soporific, the candidness of the instruction often makes students appreciate the importance of foundational knowledge, helping them avoid a jejune understanding of the subject. It’s not uncommon for a flippant attitude to emerge among beginners, but with time, this is replaced by more approbatory recognition of the discipline’s significance.

0.0.2.4 Passage 04

The Eiffel Tower, an iconic structure in Paris, is a conspicuous symbol of French ingenuity and engineering prowess, towering over the city. However, its original reception was less than amiable, with many critics confounding its design with disdain, calling it an eyesore. Despite these critiques, the tower has become so synonymous with Paris that it’s nearly impossible to differentiate the city from the monument itself. In its early years, some even considered the structure an apostate against traditional French architecture, marking a departure from classical styles. Yet, through the years, it has emerged as a sedulous testament to progress, overcoming early disparagements. Like a hound relentlessly pursuing its goal, the Eiffel Tower rose to prominence, its critics unable to arrogate its position as a cultural landmark. Today, it stands as a symbol of both martial precision and artistic elegance, despite being built during an era when many regarded it as an arrant folly. Yet, its towering presence is anything but phlegmatic, as it continues to inspire awe in visitors from around the world.

0.0.3 Segment 03

0.0.3.1 Passage 01

The Amazon Rainforest, often referred to as the “lungs of the Earth,” is a vast and diverse ecosystem that spans across nine countries in South America. Its ecological importance is impregnable, playing a crucial role in regulating the global climate by absorbing large amounts of carbon dioxide. However, human activity, such as deforestation, continues to exasperate conservation efforts, as the forest’s delicate balance is being disrupted. To disabuse those who think that the Amazon is invulnerable, it is important to note that its survival is increasingly under threat. While some espouse the idea of economic development over environmental concerns, many environmentalists argue that the future of the Earth hinges on preserving this irreplaceable resource. The Amazon also has a forthcoming role in scientific discoveries, with ongoing research revealing new species and medicinal plants. Despite challenges, the Amazon remains a thoroughgoing testament to the Earth’s natural beauty and resilience, and efforts to protect it have been gaining momentum globally. The region’s indigenous peoples, although diffident about outsiders, have long been protectors of the forest, offering valuable knowledge on sustainable living. As the world faces environmental crises, the Amazon serves as a audacious reminder of nature’s grandeur and fragility. The devastation of parts of the forest would stultify any efforts to combat climate change. The increasing power of multinational corporations, sometimes acting as a junta in their impact on the region, poses a serious threat to the rainforest’s survival. Preserving the Amazon is nothing short of an apotheosis of global environmental efforts.

0.0.3.2 Passage 02

The journey of exploring new cultures can often be filled with both joy and tribulation. While the rewards of travel can be immense, travelers must also abrogate some of their preconceived notions and habits. In certain parts of the world, people may have a rakish appearance, with a confident air that might come off as hauteur to those unfamiliar with the culture. Still, if one can dispatch any fears quickly, the experience will be enriching. However, hampering circumstances such as language barriers or unfamiliar environments can sometimes make the journey languid and tiresome. Still, the effort is often worth it. As one becomes more accustomed, they might bristle at the notion of having to revert to their old, comfortable ways. Some interactions, however, can have invidious qualities, with undercurrents of jealousy or competition. Fortunately, many people remain guileless, welcoming others with genuine warmth. The intimate connections forged in such environments often begin with subtle intimations of shared understanding.

0.0.3.3 Passage 03

In the small town, the demeaning behavior of the local leader became a topic of much reproach, as many felt that he had fallen from the pinnacle of integrity. His actions seemed to galvanize the community, pushing them to take action and demand change. A once derelict and uninvolved group of citizens were now full of energy and purpose, though they were also unnerved by the unrest that had taken root. Some detractors called him a malingeringer, accusing him of avoiding responsibility. In response, he offered admonitory statements, attempting to shift blame while trying to consecrate his legacy. Despite his efforts to tout his achievements, the community remained skeptical, and the ultimate denouement of the situation was yet to unfold.

0.0.3.4 Passage 04

The old town, once a vibrant hub, now looked lugubrious, with its antiquated buildings and fading architecture, leaving an impression of decay. It had reached its zenith decades ago, but now it seemed to hobble along, struggling with its old ways. The town's leaders, often seen to badger one another over petty issues, failed to redress the mounting challenges. Still, one or two had an uncanny prescience of the future and knew that change was inevitable. Their scrupulous attention to detail in preserving the town's best aspects stood in stark contrast to the others' apathy. In moments of conversation, a few of the more urbane residents spoke with a nuance that reflected an understanding of both the past and the future, trying to keep the town's spirit alive amidst the decline.

0.0.4 Segment 03

0.0.4.1 Passage 01

The discussion at the university symposium began as a casual powwow, but soon evolved into a spirited debate. An erudite professor of political philosophy presented a tendentious argument in favor of centralized governance, sparking strong reactions from the audience. His rhetoric was artful, weaving through tortuous lines of reasoning that required focused attention. A colleague attempted to admonish him gently, warning that such bias might alienate others. As the debate culminated in a round of open questions, a student stood up, her presence almost ethereal in her quiet confidence. She asked how, in a diverse society, one viewpoint could prevail without disseminating knowledge across perspectives. Her question drew applause, and the mood shifted to a more genial exchange of ideas.

0.0.4.2 Passage 02

The general's downfall was not due to a lack of strategy but rather his own hubris, which led him to ignore the warnings of his advisors. His speeches were often filled with inanity, lacking substance but delivered with unwarranted confidence. When the campaign failed, the press was quick to upbraid him for his arrogance. His staff, many of them callow recruits, had simply echoed his dogmatic views. Though a victory was eventually declared, it was a pyrrhic one—won at too great a cost. In trying to justify his decisions, he attempted to beg the question rather than provide evidence. Critics would later extrapolate from his mistakes the broader flaws in the military's leadership. Some reports even implicated senior officials in poor planning. Ultimately, the president had to countermand several directives to restore credibility.

0.0.4.3 Passage 03

The explorer's journal chronicled her intrepid journey through remote mountain ranges, where the terrain was harsh and the risks high. Despite the dangers, her spirit remained ebullient, inspiring her crew with her unwavering enthusiasm. Along the way, they encountered locals with entrenched traditions, resistant to outside influence. One rival expedition, led by an imperious and insufferable commander, created unnecessary enmity through their arrogance. Meanwhile, the slow and plodding pace of their travel was lightened by a guide whose voice was as mellifluous as it was informative. At a local market, she was amused by the tawdry souvenirs sold to tourists and scoffed at the hackneyed phrases painted on signs—proof that even in remote places, clichés abound.

0.0.4.4 Passage 04

The once-quiet coastal town began to burgeon into a bustling port after the construction of a new harbor, a project designed to buttress the local economy. Despite the robust growth, not everyone welcomed the change. Longtime residents, some of whom grew dolorous at the loss of their peaceful routines, voiced their concerns at town meetings. The debates grew tempestuous, with opposing parties refusing to budge—especially one adamant council member who would not concede an inch. A few frivolous objections made by attention-seeking participants were quickly dismissed. But deeper issues remained, such as how to deal with an influx of outsiders, some of whom were miscreants causing trouble. In hindsight, the town's leaders had to qualify their initial optimism; the benefits, though tangible, came with abysmal consequences they hadn't foreseen.

0.0.5 Segment 04

0.0.5.1 Passage 01

The migratory patterns of birds present a fascinating conundrum for ornithologists, who strive to understand the concomitant effects of climate change, habitat loss, and navigation instincts. While some species are tractable enough to be tracked and studied, others defy easy observation, frustrating even the most seasoned researchers. In their quest, scientists have shown immense ingenuity, using satellite tags and AI models. However, they often face opposition from those who denigrate conservation efforts as overly idealistic. When migration routes suddenly change, conservationists don't quail; instead, they adapt with persistence. Despite occasional rash policy changes that disrupt bird habitats, the work of such researchers is creditable and often deserves a public panegyric. Still, delays in protection laws tend to rile both scientists and environmentalists alike.

0.0.5.2 Passage 02

The construction of the Panama Canal was no simple engineering feat—it was a geopolitical ploy and technological marvel. Despite a raft of challenges, including disease and terrain, the project's success marked an auspicious turn for global trade. Engineers had to contrive innovative methods to manage elevation and water flow, and only a stalwart workforce could endure the demands. Still, political discord between nations loomed large. While some documents and structures from that time remain extant, the legacy is equally philosophical—pitting intransigent national interests against global cooperation. Even the most saturnine critics had to admit the project was a monumental success, though many sought to check American influence thereafter.

0.0.5.3 Passage 03

The Solar System, a structured yet dynamic entity, has long captivated both scientists and sybarites alike—those who revel in cosmic beauty as much as luxury. The moment of its heliocentric realization was transformative in science. Yet, even in modern discourse, some hold anachronistic views, clinging to geocentric notions. Unlike the placid revolutions of Neptune, debates around Pluto's planetary status continue to goad the scientific community. Some harangue NASA with fervor, demanding reclassification. It's impertinent to dismiss these arguments, though many are artless in their logic. Theories often subsume smaller ideas into grand cosmological models, a process that can cow even experienced astronomers faced with the universe's enormity.

0.0.5.4 Passage 04

The culinary world, once in its heyday of traditional techniques and handwritten recipes, has transformed into a domain defined by innovation and spectacle. Yet, this evolution has not been without critique. Many chefs castigate the new generation for their wanton disregard for authenticity, accusing them of indulging in showmanship over substance. The rise of social media “foodies” has brought with it a profuse stream of content—much of it lacking depth—turning thoughtful culinary discourse into endless palaver. Meanwhile, critics lament the turpitude behind food waste and labor exploitation in high-end kitchens. Still, amid these infelicitous realities, a new zeitgeist has emerged—one that favors sustainability and inclusivity, seeking a return to a more pristine form of culinary art. However, some critics argue the shift has also ushered in noisome trends that prioritize viral appeal over gastronomic excellence.

0.0.6 Segment 05

0.0.6.1 Passage 01

Here is a short GRE-style passage with your requested words, formatted as per your instructions:

The professor’s lecture on the plague, replete with macabre anecdotes, struck some students as indecorous for a morning session. Yet, her intention was not to shock but to challenge the class’s assumptions through empiricism rather than sanitized narratives. When a critic labeled her examples as “sensational,” she refused to retract her approach, insisting it was a deliberate pedagogical choice. Others, more obliging to convention, avoided controversial topics altogether, fearing departmental excoriateion. Still, she argued that avoiding discomfort allows minds to ossify, making growth elude both student and teacher. Petty objections about tone seemed picayune in comparison to the intellectual rigor she demanded.

0.0.6.2 Passage 02

Despite the vicissitudes of economic downturns and leadership changes, Maya remained a tenacious advocate for transparency in public office. She refused the subtle perquisites offered by lobbyists, aware that such privileges often denote deeper currents of venality. Her critics labeled her sanctimonious, scoffing at her moral rigor, while supporters viewed her as a rare percipient voice amid the noise. Unlike her more Pollyannaish peers, she did not downplay the system’s flaws, nor did she lack the gall to challenge entrenched powers. Her stance, though not always popular, had become a perennial thorn in the side of corruption.

0.0.7 The Fall of the Model Officer

Once a paragon of discipline and integrity, Lieutenant Harrow had grown increasingly besotted with the charms of a foreign dignitary's daughter. His once-candid assessments were now clouded by loyalty to her father's treacherous plans. Harrow had always been amenable to advice, but this time he allowed her to ingratiate herself so completely that he ceded control of classified protocols. His superiors, splenetic and stunned, assigned an agent to ferret out the source of the leaks. Harrow, under investigation, found a brief respite only in recalling the days before he'd let love cloud duty.

0.0.8 Shadows Beneath the Surface

The committee meeting began with a stern warning from the chair, who had vowed to cancel any facetious remarks during the review of wartime broadcasts. But despite the grave atmosphere, one member's tone remained surly, his contributions laced with contempt. When asked for a clear position, he became evasive, dodging accountability with rhetorical flourish. A recapitulation of events was requested, and a scrupulous secretary read from detailed minutes. Meanwhile, a junior assistant, anxious to grovel before superiors, insisted even the most innocuous jokes had damaging potential. It was, many agreed, a benighted hour for open discourse. In the end, the board's final word was that humor, like history, must sometimes yield to policy.

0.0.9 Segment 06

0.0.10 The Tumultuous Rise of a Revolutionary

What began as the vision of a passionate dilettante quickly evolved into a full-blown movement led by a charismatic firebrand. Determined to supplant the staid leadership, he launched campaigns that seemed ineluctable in their momentum. His victories were vaunted across media outlets, and he managed to vanquish seasoned politicians. Yet, in a veritable twist of fate, his downfall brought a wave of schadenfreude among his rivals, leaving historians to derive lessons from his brief yet blazing career.

0.0.11 The Rise and Fall of a Revolutionary

Once a mere dilettante in political theory, Kamal quickly became a firebrand, challenging the staid traditions of governance with radical zeal. His rise was veritable and swift, his movement vaunted as the future. Yet, as history has often shown, attempts to supplant deeply rooted systems face ineluctable resistance. Though he momentarily vanquished his critics, a wave of schadenfreude swept the media when his policies faltered. In the end, he failed to derive lasting reform, outpaced by the very forces he once hoped to reshape.

0.0.12 The Puzzle of the Forgotten Manuscript

The historian's findings were largely derivative of earlier works, and his lectures became increasingly discursive, leaving students baffled. One rainy evening, however, he experienced an epiphany that led him to a byzantine trail of documents. Though labeled a misanthrope due to his melancholy demeanor, he was enticed by the thrill of discovery. The artifact he unearthed antedated all known versions, breathing life into what had been dismissed as humdrum scholarship—until he made one fatal err in translation.

0.0.13 A Test of Loyalty

Bound by constraint and suspicion, the committee tried to impute blame for the failure on an inveterate skeptic among them. Their accusations, however, were based on specious arguments that lacked real credence. Despite his diminutive stature and initially irresolute speech, he proved to be a boon to the project. His magnanimous response to the false charges—and his thrifty management of resources—ultimately saved their work.

0.0.14 Segment 07

0.0.15 The Scholar's Ascent

The student's precipitous rise to academic fame was aided by a generous stipend and an impeccable work ethic. Although occasionally distracted by puerile amusements, he remained unstinting in his efforts. His initial muted enthusiasm gradually faded, but never enough to attenuate his achievements. Although some of his early essays were jejune, later professors would corroborate his potential, noting a becoming maturity in his thinking.

0.0.16 The Storm Within

During the long rainy season, emotions would wax and tensions rise. To assuage the growing restlessness, villagers tried to compound their distractions, engaging in games and debates. Yet even the limpid streams could not wash away the irritation that exacerbated under the gloomy skies. A few telling glances revealed deep-seated frustrations, which outsiders could only glean through oblique remarks. The banality of daily life, combined with a sullen atmosphere, made the season feel endless.

0.0.17 The Paradox of the Hermit

The ascetic life of the mountain hermit was antithetical to modern indulgence. His austere existence, devoid of comforts, deterred most from seeking wisdom at his feet. Yet his presence seemed to conciliate the curious few. He remained evasive when asked personal questions, his expression inscrutable. Though seemingly amorphous in ideology, he was not without conviction. If one dared to rankle him, forgiveness came easily—for his temperament made all but the most serious offenses feel venial.

0.0.18 The Forgotten Idealist

The ascetic monk, once revered, was now a figure fading into obscurity. Some ascribed his fall to a trusted aide—a quisling who betrayed his teachings. His imprudent trust in others, combined with his archaic ideals, rendered him ineffective in a pragmatic world. His warnings, once dismissed as superfluous, became prophecy. He had become an anathema to the very community he tried to save, leaving him crestfallen amidst a dearth of integrity and a flood of mendacity.

0.0.19 Segment 08

0.0.20 The Curious Scholar

The professor, a doughty defender of obscure ideas, offered a pithy critique of mainstream theories during a lecture filled with forthright remarks. His discussion of a recondite mathematical paradox stirred curiosity, though many in the audience had only a smattering of the background knowledge required. An incessant stream of questions followed, tempered by his efforts to mitigate confusion. Though some students gainsay his interpretations, his tone remained sentimental, and he gently warned against prolixity in scholarly debate.

0.0.21 The Benevolent Mentor

Dr. Langley, a edifying presence in the academic community, sought to placate the concerns of her anxious students with benign reassurance. She took care to enumerate each step of her reasoning, ensuring no one would misattribute her arguments to carelessness. Yet, her attempts to eradicate common misconceptions were often thwarted by stubborn resistance, leaving her with a sense of frustrate exhaustion. Despite her solicitude, she knew some efforts were futile—yet she persevered, believing even small progress was worth the struggle.

0.0.22 The Irascible Scholar

The professor's derisive remarks about rudimentary concepts stood in stark contrast to his usual serene demeanor, revealing an underlying irascible temperament that even his reservation couldn't conceal; though he possessed only a modicum of patience for such artlessness, he sought to mitigate his harshness and qualify his criticism with attempts to augment their understanding rather than dismiss their efforts entirely.

0.0.23 The Diplomat's Dilemma

The fickle nature of political alliances made the ambassador's position transitory, yet she refused to perpetuate the cycle of indifference that characterized her predecessors; though her deferential manner sometimes bordered on impudent when confronting officials who showed gall in negotiations, her provident planning and tact prevented what could have been a career-ending gaffe during the delicate peace talks.

0.0.24 Segment 09

0.0.25 The Investigative Journalist

The impecunious reporter, though often dismissed for his blinkered focus on municipal corruption, made copious notes about the graft pervading city hall; his vociferous denunciations at press conferences - often punctuated by a biting quip - sought to demonstrate how these practices were tantamount to theft, while critics would conflate his zeal with naivety, failing to see the analogous patterns in other cities or the appurtenant systems enabling such corruption.

0.0.26 The Reformist's Challenge

The jingoist mayor launched into a tirade against the indigent protesters, his unscrupulous tactics laying bare the ignoble motives behind his policies; while civic leaders sought to defray the costs of the growing conflagration of dissent, the glut of empty promises did little to mollify the crowds, who saw the governor's belated offer of clemency as too little, too late.

0.0.27 The Academic Debate

The young scholar's inchoate theory about the endemic corruption in publishing drew immediate criticism from senior professors who assailed her methodology; while she attempted to posit a framework to explain how peer review might precipitate rather than prevent bias, her critics dismissed the argument as mere bromide. As she continued to peruse the convoluted guidelines that sanction current practices, she found unexpected support from a prominent proponent of academic reform who validated many of her concerns.

0.0.28 The Art World Controversy

The iconoclastic curator's latest exhibition, drawn from rarefied private collections, provoked vituperative criticism from philistine local critics who called his aesthetic vision erratic and obtuse; his debonair demeanor at the opening belied the inflammable nature of the debate he'd ignited, while more chary observers worried the parochial response might discourage future avant-garde shows.

0.0.29 Segment 10

0.0.30 The Miser's Downfall

The parsimonious merchant, though economical to a fault, found his wealth dissipate when bellicose rivals exploited his dilatory response to market changes. His lachrymose pleas for preemptive aid were met with maudlin indifference from those he'd once ostracized, proving even austere habits couldn't elicit sympathy from the wronged.

0.0.31 The Salon's Provocateur

The raconteur's lascivious tales enervated the ravenous audience, who devoured his eclectic mix of iconoclast philosophy and catholic wisdom. When critics accused him of exemplifying decadence, he countered with a screed so trenchant it silenced even the insolent noblemen, proving panache could outmaneuver hostility.

0.0.32 The Reformer's Trial

The proselytizing reformer, an exemplar of radical thought, watched her movement degrade as peripatetic followers dissipated under preemptive persecution. Her ponderous manifesto, meant to elicit solidarity, instead drew maudlin accusations of destitute idealism, while ostracized former allies mocked her maxims as hollow.

0.0.33 Segment 11

0.0.33.1 A Politician's Predicament

The speaker's inkling that the politician was being disingenuous grew stronger with every garrulous tangent. Rather than directly answering the questions, the politician would hail the accomplishments of their party, a tactic that felt both presumptuous and transparently evasive. The truth, much like a whispered secret, remained elusive. The entire press conference seemed to be a desperate attempt to create a façade, perhaps a symptom of some deeper collusion that the public had yet to uncover. When a journalist dared to ask a direct question about the politician's alleged misogynist remarks, the politician chose to repudiate the claims as mere slander, a move that only solidified the public's perception that their actions were ultimately detrimental to their own credibility.